Congratulations! With a Zimmermann upright or grand piano designed by C. Bechstein, you have acquired a valuable musical partner; one that will open up a wonderful world and bring lasting pleasure to you and your family.

Piano music is something that can touch us deeply. It opens our heart and senses to beauty, and to the positive things in life. It motivates us, stimulate us, and make us happy. Playing the piano promotes creativity, sensitivity and the powers of concentration and observation – marvellous side-effects for school or work!

Making music reconnects us with our most basic origins and enables us to create a world of our own. Energy begins to flow, and we feel good. You probably won’t put your new piano in your garden – but you can conjure up the Garden of Eden simply by playing it.

Playing these eighty-eight black and white keys is an enriching experience for young and old. What a pleasure to improvise, try out new chords and express yourself musically! Intensively interacting with your piano, you gradually discover the beneficial effects of music on you and the people near you, as the pleasure of playing mingles with the pride of improving your skills.

Playing the piano hones all of our senses for the wonderful world of music, and at the same time is very relaxing. In tête-à-tête with your Zimmermann, you savour wonderful moments of balance. Far from being a luxury, piano playing nourishes the soul.

Zimmermann pianos boast excellent price for value. “Designed by C. Bechstein” means these instruments carry the “genetic heritage” of a great manufacturer to facilitate your début in the world of piano. Choosing straightaway a quality piano, a partner that fits you, guarantees that your pleasure of playing will last. Your Zimmermann is to become your friend – one that understands you, fosters your joy of playing and makes piano playing a unique musical experience.
Having a quality piano from the very outset is essential for debutants to develop a lasting interest in playing and an eagerness to practice. Place your trust in Europe’s most important manufacturer! Whether it’s for the first apartment of your own, your children’s education or the fulfilment of a long-cherished dream, your Zimmermann was developed by the Bechstein group as a reliable, robust instrument with a remarkable sound character – a piano that carries all the genetic heritage of German engineering and piano-making.

Each instrument made by the Bechstein group embodies the experience gathered by C. Bechstein Pianofortefabrik AG over more than 160 years in the development and manufacture of upright and grand pianos. This exhaustive expertise guarantees outstanding quality in all market segments.

Zimmermann
Designed by
C. Bechstein:
The Right Choice
The Zimmermann brand was established in 1884 by the brothers Max and Richard Zimmermann in the small town of Mölkau, near Leipzig. They called their company the Leipziger Pianofortefabrik Gebrüder Zimmermann. In 1895, the business already employed 120 skilled workers. Around 1904, in the golden age of piano when hundreds, even thousands of manufacturers existed, the Zimmermann factory was the second largest in Europe. Zimmermann soon opened new production sites in Eilenburg, Gotha, and in Seifhennersdorf, the location of the C. Bechstein factory today. During and between the two World Wars, exports suffered and production capacities fluctuated. In 1946, the company was nationalised under the name VEB Sächsische Pianofortefabrik Seifhennersdorf. With an output of up to 8,000 instruments per year, the Zimmermann factory was once again one of the largest in Europe, exporting to thirty-five countries.

Europe is the cradle of piano music. Of the many piano manufacturers active around 1900, only a few went on to become world-famous. Zimmermann was one of them.

Piano playing has always been part of a select education. Likewise, to have shares in a piano company evidences a lively interest in cultural assets.
In 1992, C. Bechstein Berlin, the top-ranking manufacturer of high-quality upright and grand pianos, took over the Zimmermann brand. The production site in Seifhennersdorf, Saxony, was expanded, and became one of Europe’s leading piano factories. Zimmermann, “Made by C. Bechstein, Germany” as the label read in those days, rapidly became a market leader in the upper middle class. Production continued at the German site until 2011.

As the piano market began to fluctuate, the Bechstein group had to restructure its brands and the respective production sites. Today the Zimmermann brand is the gateway to the Bechstein world. The next higher level is W. Hoffmann, “Made by C. Bechstein Europe,” followed by Bechstein, the premium segment, and C. Bechstein, the masterpiece series.

Bechstein’s Germany-based R&D centre designs all instruments of the group, decides what materials and manufacturing processes should be used and supervises every step of production, down to the smallest detail. Thus, the brand “Zimmermann designed by C. Bechstein” carries the genetic heritage of a great manufacturer.

Around 1900, the piano-making trade employed thousands of specially trained professionals. Piano-making was, and is still today, a fascinating trade, one that is practiced with pride.

Some things never change: wood processing, for example, must be entrusted to skilled workers. Those who have these special skills draw immense satisfaction from working with this natural material.
Not everybody can start playing on a Bechstein – let alone a C. Bechstein. However, it’s the heartfelt wish of the C. Bechstein company, supplier of instruments to professionals since 1853, to bring piano music to every household, even those on a tight budget. After all, everyone has to start small.

Zimmermann designed by C. Bechstein democratises piano music. These affordable instruments meet high quality standards and are manufactured with genuine Bechstein skill and expertise. Zimmermann upright and grand pianos are far above the quality standards in their price class.

Welcome to the Bechstein world! The company’s impressive development has been on everyone’s lips over the past twenty-five years. Indeed, with its wide range of brands of the best possible quality for every budget, Bechstein welcomes everyone in the great piano family. Of course, there are clear distinctions between the different brands, as they correspond to different levels of excellence. Just like in the automobile industry: even if you want an economy car, you might turn to a large, renowned manufacturer because you know you can rely on its expertise; you also know that it uses the right components and the best processing techniques, and that lower prices are possible only with the integration of international business partners. A renowned manufacturer like Bechstein will do all it can to satisfy customers in every market segment.

Each model in the different brands of the Bechstein group is developed by German specialists. The extensive training of the staff of all partners involved in production plays an important role in the company philosophy.

Moreover, Bechstein employees at the Zimmermann production site strictly control the implementation of the quality specifications determined in the upstream development. Meticulous inspections carried out at every production step ensure the consistent quality of Zimmermann pianos. After passing all inspections, the instruments are given the Bechstein seal of quality, which is cast in the iron frame and confirmed by a number next to the keyboard.

Bechstein quality management guarantees that every Zimmermann instrument complies with European tradition and sets new, clearly defined standards within the entry-level segment. Thus, a brand new Zimmermann piano that bears the “Designed by C. Bechstein” seal of quality with pride offers excellent value for money and is the better and more reliable alternative to a second-hand instrument.
Discriminating quality criteria

Bechstein quality management ensures that every Zimmermann upright and grand piano meets stringent quality standards.

Don’t settle for less than a beautiful piano voice! Zimmermann upright and grand pianos stand out with their full, differentiable, flexible voice, together with their dynamic action that is unparalleled in this price class.

The photo at the right pictures all the quality components inside a Zimmermann upright piano: the cast-iron frame, the stringing design and the action assembly are all rooted in the European tradition.

Together with the strong, solid wood backframe, the cast-iron frame absorbs the force of string tension and ensures the instrument’s solidity, rich sonority and tuning stability.

Quality Components in the Standard Line

Zimmermann pianos boast a quality action: all movable parts are made of wood — never of plastic — and assembled in a sturdy frame with balanced dimensions. As regards the action, “Designed by C. Bechstein” means a pleasing touch, light repetition and excellent key control.

The hammerheads are made exclusively of solid wood cores and pads of finest sheep felt. Such manufacturing principles are in line with the Bechstein tradition that originated in 1853. The pleasant touch and tone of your Zimmermann guarantee that you’ll enjoy your instrument for many years to come.
